

How to appeal against the decision of the public authority or institution in where the person considers that his or her right of access to information of public interest requested

If a person considers that his or her right of access to information of public interest has been infringed, he or she may lodge an administrative complaint with the head of the public authority or institution from which the information was requested.

The administrative complaint, according to the models, shall be submitted within 30 days of becoming aware of the explicit or tacit refusal of the employees of the public authority or institution.
